ROCKETS-

In other words, the Rockets were cutting off passes, poking the ball away and generally doing everything they could to get back on offense - and it worked all night long.

Consequently, Napoleon/G-S never really managed to find a rhythm, and could do little as the NR-S offense built an insurmountable lead. Building most of that lead was Bennett Meier, who exploded for 20 points on Tuesday.

When the dust finally settled, the Rockets emerged with a dominant 64-37 win, their fourth victory of the season.

The Rockets' overall record following the win on Tuesday was 4-2. Their final overall record a season ago was 4-14.

Meanwhile, watching the game on Tuesday was most, if not the entirety, of the Carrington Cardinals squad, who had taken the short drive north to view their next opponents.

The Cardinals faced off against the Rockets on Thursday, Jan. 4, the first meeting between the two rivals this season. The results of that game will be covered in next week's edition of the Transcript.
