practices for crop production. Nearly all of their fertilizer is produced as manure from their livestock operation. Justin is a school board and church council member. He is also a township supervisor and volunteers on the Foster County Zoning committee. For the past 14 years, Sara has worked as the township clerk and is a current youth group leader.

David and Roxane, along with their three sons, operate a grain farm and a commercial trucking business hauling grain. David has been farming for 28 years and raises soybeans, corn, pinto beans and durum. He utilizes conventional to minimum tillage on his farm. He is thankful for the opportunity to work side-by-side with his three sons. David attended Jamestown College and NDSU. David is a city council member and volunteer fireman.

Roxane is a volunteer book-keeper for their church and café, and a past city council member.

Grant and Jane have been farming and ranching for 36 years. They grow beans, peas, corn and wheat, and raise Red Angus cattle while backgrounding their own calves. They operate as a no-till farm. Previously, Grant had a custom seeding and combining operation. He is involved in the community as a local firefighter and a member of the community club. He previously served on the township board and drove a school bus. Jane works as a dental assistant and is active on her church council. She has also served on the Town and Country Women's Club and summer recreation boards.

An agribusiness award recipient also is chosen annually. This award recognizes individuals who have distinguished themselves in the field of agriculture and business in North Dakota and beyond. This year's award recipient was Steve Bobb, a 1982 NDSU graduate and retired Executive Vice President and Chief Marketing Officer for BNSF.

This year marked the 50th anniversary of the Harvest Bowl. Agriculture is North Dakota's top industry, and North Dakota State University is proud of its connections to agriculture as a land-grant research university. Throughout its history, NDSU has made major contributions in agriculture across the Upper Midwest, nation and world. Many NDSU student-athletes come from farming and ranching families and are also pursuing agricultural degrees. Since 1973, NDSU has celebrated the relationship between agriculture, education and Bison Athletics excellence with the Harvest Bowl banquet and football game.

catch up to the ball and send Meier to the line, but not before 32 seconds had been removed from the clock.

Meier missed both free-throws, however, leaving the Rockets with just a 1-point lead with 5.4 seconds remaining. But as the Dragons' raced to their end of the court, Easton Benz cut off a pass and stole away possession, denying Dunseith even the opportunity to throw up yet another buzzer-beater attempt.

The final score after four quarters and two overtime periods was 82-81, and the Rockets had won their first CNDC Tournament since 2009, taking down two Class A teams in the process.

Leading scorers in the championship game for the Rockets were Easton Simon with 23, and Shaun Reimche and Bennett Meier, who each scored 18 points.

After five games this season the Rockets are now a perfect 5-0, and won't play again until after the new year. Their first game of 2025 will take place on Tuesday, Jan. 7 at Napoleon, beginning with junior varsity at 5:30 p.m.
